Notation

Accidentals apply only to the note they precede, unless a note is repeated without a break.

Quarter tones are notated thus: \sharp and \flat , except where the pitch is raised by an indeterminate amount, where \uparrow is used for sharp, and \downarrow for flat. Fingerings are given in the case of Flute and Clarinet, although these do not necessarily need to be adhered to.

Clarinet is written transposed. Normal octave transpositions apply for appropriate instruments.

\sim : glissando

\curvearrowright and \curvearrowleft : portamento

v : leave note to vibrate

tr : flutter-tonguing (wind), tremolo (strings, percussion).

b : breath marks

Δ : wait for next cue

c : long pause (wait for conductor).

(N) : "normal" playing position after effects

ff : very fast note

For the voice:

\uparrow : very high note

\downarrow : very low note

w : whispered, appropriate pitch.

w : almost whispered, very breathy.

- additional symbols are given for the solo section in the second movement on page 28.

- Accidents are given where necessary in the score.

In unbarred sections the same beat continues unless otherwise stated.

Old age and childhood. For the rest, a man
Lives close companion to disease and tears,
Losing his long, working for other men.
Where can joy find a space in this short span?

But the world that is confused.

Notes on the Texts

The six poems are from the "Subhāsītāvatī of Vallabhadeva" (Peterson, 1961); "Sanskrit Chrestomathie" (Bohttingk, 1909); and "Bhaktihārī Poem" (Miller, 1967). The translations are taken from "Poems from the Sanskrit" (Brough 1968 Penguin) - as follows:

- I: Peterson 690 ; Brough 50.
- II: Miller 200 ; Brough 4.
- III: Miller 39 ; Brough 74
- IV: Peterson 1994 ; Brough 83.
- V: Bohttingk 118 ; Brough 58.
- VI: Bohttingk 193 ; Brough 87.
- VII: Peterson 690 ; Brough 50.

.... with my thanks to Philip Rawson for taping the Sanskrit poems so that I could transcribe them.

- Combinations
- ʃ as in shin (ʃɪn)
 - tʃ church (tʃɜ:tʃ)
 - dʒ dew (dʒu)

Notes for pronunciation:

- 1) Sanskrit aspirations: kh, gh, ch, jh, dh, th, ph, bh. Although considered as a single consonant in Sanskrit they are given two symbols in "Ananta's Elements".
- 2) Where a symbol is given in brackets - (n) - it is to be sung very lightly. This is especially the case with all (x) sounds.
- 3) No punctuation is given in the Sanskrit, therefore punctuation should be according to natural line and phrase. In the score this is indicated by a line between phonetic symbols. The space is the given available freedom in interpretation and inflection of the line. If a phrase mark is given over the notes it should be strictly adhered to.
