Introduction

With the exception of the brief extracts illustrating the last section of Chapter 4, nearly all of the litanies in this volume are presented as complete transcriptions: few of them are short works, and for this reason the volume is a bulky one. All but one have never appeared in modern edition. The exception is the setting by Monteverdi, the edition of which by Malipiero is defective in several respects. If any justification is needed for presenting so many complete examples, it must be that there are not enough other specimens in modern edition with which to compare the works discussed, and that it is intended that this volume will constitute a representative anthology, containing, in terms of both geography and chronology, a broad cross-section of settings. The works included here have been selected from a much larger body of transcriptions made during the course of my research. These are available for consultation by interested researchers.

In all cases, original note values have been retained, so that unless a piece has been transposed in accordance with the indication of the combination of clefs used, prefatory staves indicate only the original clefs. With respect to the examples for the final section of Chapter 4, the continuo parts have been omitted unless they are relevant to the discussion. Texts and spelling have been standardised, and abbreviations expanded without comment.
